STPI knowledge is required in accounts to pay because some software service providers receive STPI exemption for their software exports. Therefore, in accounts to be paid, we need to set the STPI supplier in terms of location. In India, there are different STPI sites. If a supplier provides services or materials for all or some of STPI sites, we need to keep the same STPI Wise supplier. 17) What do you understand by tax on marginal benefits or FBT? The FBT means tax on marginal benefits. It is a tax that is applied to provide some benefits to employees of the employer and the salary or wages in cash. For example, a novice lease is a benefit out of your salary or salary. So it's an example of FBT. The FBT was introduced by the 2005 Finance Act with effect from April 1, 2006. It was established at 30 % of the cost of the benefits the company paid. This is an additional tax, along with the income tax, regardless of whether the company has or does not have income tax liability. 18) What are some examples of marginal benefits? Companies offer some additional benefits to all their employees, in addition to the remuneration or salary paid to them. Some common benefits of Fringe are phone refunds, employer contribution to retirement fund, some advantages, such as tuition assistance, health insurance, child care refunds, subsidized lunchonete, free bus service to travel, employee discounts and employee stock options, etc. 19) What do you understand by a three-way match? The three-way departure is used to avoid paying incorrect payments. It is a process of matching the invoice, comparing the purchase order and receiving a report forPurchase details before making a payment. The main objective of the process of discount of TRANSITY WAYS is to reduce the risk of fraud and financial loss, preventing reimbursement of purchases not authorized. In the process of departure of TRANS WAYS, VIA, must follow the steps given below: Match the invoice price with the purchase order price. Match the quantity billed by the supplier with the ordered quantity. Match the quantity received. 20) What is a trade discount? What is its benefit? A trade discount is a discount or a reduction in price, which a manufacturer or wholesaler gives a retailer/ wholesaler when they buy a product or group of products. In other words, we can say that a trade discount is a certain percentage a manufacturer is willing to cut or reduce its list price for wholesalers or retailers. The manufacturer gives the manufacturer to the retailer based on the volume of goods such as 20% to 40% discount. The main benefit of trade discounts is attracting more customers and receiving the order in bulk, which ultimately increases the number of sales. Therefore, trade discount usually varies with the quantity of the product purchased. 21) What is the difference between Consignor and Consignee? Consignor: The consignor is the owner of the goods and is responsible for delivering the goods to the Consignee. For example, goods producers, wholesalers, etc. Consignee: Consignee is the person who receives the goods, and he possesses the goods and not the owner. For example, suppliers, distributors, etc. 22) What do you understand by an early payment discount? Early payment discount is a type of discount given to buyers when they pay their bills early. According to the terms and conditions mentioned in the purchase order, the suppliers discount buyers when they make payment before the due date. For example, if a company ABC sold 1 million rupees worth of goods to XYZ Company and payment terms are 30 days from the invoice date. The ABC Company can give a 5% discount to XYZ Company if they make the payment within one week from the invoice date. It is an example of an early payment discount. discount.
